Seasonal Selections

Summer weather often requires plenty of hydration. Why not mix some of the season's best produce with a little carbonated water to make the perfect, refreshing soda? Try limes, blueberries, cherries, raspberries or strawberries. All are in season and offer many combinations to please any palate.

Revolutionary Words

"Learning is not attained by chance, it must be sought for with ardour and attended to with diligence." —Abigail Adams

Congratulations!

Record-Setting High

The summer heat may have you sweating it out, but compare it to this scorcher: The mercury hit 134 degrees Fahrenheit in July 1913 at Furnace Creek Ranch in California's Death Valley, setting the record for highest air temperature ever recorded.

Laugh Lines

Laugh Lines

Teacher: Tell the class what book you read and what you thought of it.

Student: I read the phone book, but I didn't understand it. It had too many characters.

Q: Why was the library so messy?

A: Because it was full of litter-ature.

Librarian: Why don't you take home a Dr. Seuss?

Student: I didn't know he made house calls.

Q: What did Jim say when his father gave him a really cheap dictionary for his birthday?

A: "I can't find the words to thank you."

Daughter: Dad, what does the word dictionary mean?

Father: Why don't you look it up?

Daughter: Where?

Stages Under the Stars

Stage meets starlight in these world-famous open-air arenas:

Red Rocks Amphitheatre. This mountaintop venue is always ready to rock. Wedged between 300-foot-high prehistoric sandstone walls, builders broke ground on the amphitheatre during the 1930s as part of a Depression-era jobs and conservation program. Laborers were paid a dollar a day to carve this famous theater overlooking Denver, Colo. Since then, Red Rocks has hosted legends like The Beatles and Stevie Wonder.

Dalhalla. From prehistoric meteorite crater to limestone quarry to outdoor arena, Dalhalla is like a Swedish coliseum scooped into the dense surrounding forest. The stage itself is perched over a pool of crystalline water. Among its international repertoire of performers are musicians Dionne Warwick, Sting, The Beach Boys, Lauryn Hill and Kiss.

Theatre Antique d'Orange. This first-century Roman theater located in France has served several purposes in its nearly 2,000-year existence, including as a fort and prison. Today, the UNESCO World Heritage site has returned to its roots as a stage for performers including Hans Zimmer, The Police and David Guetta.

Cheeseburger Choices

The grills are sizzling from sea to shining sea with these different states' spins on the classic cheeseburger.

Oklahoma onion burger. These smashburgers are cooked together with plenty of caramelized onions, topped with American cheese and then finished with steamed buns. This burger boasts a one-to-one ratio of beef to inexpensive onions, making it an affordable and delicious option, especially for past generations of Oklahomans during the Depression and the Dust Bowl.

Animal style at In-N-Out. At California-based fast-food chain In-N-Out, customers in the know can order burgers "animal style." This off-menu code means the thin patties are cooked with mustard and topped with the traditional tomato and lettuce plus pickle, grilled onions and extra spread.

Connecticut steamed cheeseburger. No flame, all gain for these Connecticut favorites. The thick patties are steamed in tins resembling small meatloaves, topped with gooey melted white cheddar cheese (also steamed) and a slice of raw onion. Steamed cheese sandwiches were popular during the Depression when few workers could afford meat. In later, more prosperous years, Connecticut diners added steamed ground beef.

Flag Facts

Our American flag has been flying for more than 240 years and has quite the story to tell. Here are just a few snippets from Old Glory's rich history.

Kid wonder. Our current version of the flag was created by a high school student for a history project. In 1958, Robert G. Heft designed the 50-star flag—a year before Alaska or Hawaii officially became states, though rumor was that they would both join the United States before long. Heft's teacher, however, gave him poor marks for counting and said Heft could save his grade if he could convince the government to accept his design. Two years later, Heft got a call from President Eisenhower: his flag was in. (And yes, his teacher did increase his grade, though by this time Heft had graduated!)

Lunar legacy. Six American flags have been placed on the moon. An American astronaut has planted the flag for each of the six lunar missions, bringing the Stars and Stripes to space.

The tried and true Red, White and Blue. Our pennant's colors are as symbolic as the numbers of stars and stripes. Red was chosen for valor and bravery, white for purity and innocence, and blue for vigilance, perseverance and justice.

Famous Performers for U.S. Troops

"Entertainment is always a national asset. Invaluable in time of peace, it is indispensable in wartime," said President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1943, two years after merging several service organizations into the United Service Organizations (USO) to boost national morale and launching a tradition of entertainers rallying troops overseas. Check out these well-known performers who became as renowned for their service tours as their talent.

Bob Hope. Comic legend Bob Hope performed overseas for over four decades. He had a knack for knowing the humor soldiers needed and was famous for joking with wounded soldiers during hospital visits, "Okay, fellas. Don't get up."

Marlene Dietrich. Born and raised in Germany, actress and singer Marlene Dietrich became a U.S. citizen after the start of World War II. The Oscar nominee performed more than 500 times over two USO tours for Allied forces across North Africa, Italy, France and Germany.

Sammy Davis Jr. Musician and Rat Pack member Sammy Davis Jr. was drafted in World War II at 18. Decades later, he spent a two-week USO tour entertaining soldiers in Vietnam. His first overseas show in 1972 drew a crowd of 15,000 service members, and he urged other entertainers to perform in USO tours.
